The Department of Political Science at the University of Chicago is one of the leading departments in the world. It has a long and distinguished history of research and teaching in political science, and is currently one of the most active and productive departments in the field. The department is home to many of the most prominent scholars in the discipline, and its faculty members have made significant contributions to the understanding of politics and society.

The department offers a wide range of courses and programs, and is committed to providing a high-quality education to its students. It also has a strong tradition of public service, and its faculty members have been instrumental in shaping public policy and promoting social justice.

The department is currently seeking applications for a number of positions, and is particularly interested in candidates with a strong background in political science and a commitment to research and teaching. For more information, please visit our website or contact the department office.

The University of Chicago is an equal opportunity institution, and we are committed to creating a diverse and inclusive environment for our students and faculty members. We encourage applications from individuals of all backgrounds and experiences.
