

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON THE LAW OF THE SEA

The International Conference on the Law of the Sea was convened in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1958. It was the first of a series of conferences that would eventually lead to the adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) in 1982. The conference was held in Geneva from 26 June to 30 August 1958, and was attended by representatives from 26 countries. The conference was convened by the Swiss Government, and was held in the Grand Hotel in Geneva. The conference was the first of a series of conferences that would eventually lead to the adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) in 1982.

The conference was held in Geneva from 26 June to 30 August 1958, and was attended by representatives from 26 countries. The conference was convened by the Swiss Government, and was held in the Grand Hotel in Geneva. The conference was the first of a series of conferences that would eventually lead to the adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) in 1982.

The conference was held in Geneva from 26 June to 30 August 1958, and was attended by representatives from 26 countries. The conference was convened by the Swiss Government, and was held in the Grand Hotel in Geneva. The conference was the first of a series of conferences that would eventually lead to the adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) in 1982. The conference was held in Geneva from 26 June to 30 August 1958, and was attended by representatives from 26 countries. The conference was convened by the Swiss Government, and was held in the Grand Hotel in Geneva. The conference was the first of a series of conferences that would eventually lead to the adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) in 1982.

The conference was held in Geneva from 26 June to 30 August 1958, and was attended by representatives from 26 countries. The conference was convened by the Swiss Government, and was held in the Grand Hotel in Geneva. The conference was the first of a series of conferences that would eventually lead to the adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) in 1982.

□□□□□□□□ □□ □□□□ □□□□ □□□□□□ □□ □□□□