THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO is a private research university in Chicago, Illinois. It was founded in 1837 as the first American university to be organized along the European model, with a focus on research and scholarship. The university has since grown into one of the world's leading centers of learning, with a reputation for excellence in a wide range of disciplines.

The university's commitment to research and scholarship is reflected in its many distinguished faculty members, who are leaders in their fields. The university also has a strong tradition of undergraduate education, with a focus on critical thinking and intellectual inquiry.

The University of Chicago is a member of the Association of American Universities (AAU), which is a consortium of leading research universities in the United States. The university is also a member of the Ivy League, a group of eight private universities in the Northeast United States. The university's research and scholarship are supported by a variety of sources, including the federal government, private foundations, and the university's own endowment.
