

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON THE LAW OF THE SEA

The International Conference on the Law of the Sea was convened in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1958. It was the first of a series of conferences that would eventually lead to the adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) in 1982.

The conference was organized by the International Law Commission (ILC) and the International Maritime Organization (IMO). It was held in Geneva from 1958 to 1960. The conference was attended by representatives from 26 countries. The conference was a landmark event in the history of international law, as it was the first time that a large number of states had gathered to discuss the law of the sea.

The conference was a success, as it resulted in the adoption of the Geneva Convention on the High Seas in 1958. This convention was the first of a series of treaties that would eventually lead to the adoption of UNCLOS. The conference was also a landmark event in the history of international law, as it was the first time that a large number of states had gathered to discuss the law of the sea.

The conference was a landmark event in the history of international law, as it was the first time that a large number of states had gathered to discuss the law of the sea. The conference was a success, as it resulted in the adoption of the Geneva Convention on the High Seas in 1958. This convention was the first of a series of treaties that would eventually lead to the adoption of UNCLOS. The conference was also a landmark event in the history of international law, as it was the first time that a large number of states had gathered to discuss the law of the sea.

The conference was a landmark event in the history of international law, as it was the first time that a large number of states had gathered to discuss the law of the sea. The conference was a success, as it resulted in the adoption of the Geneva Convention on the High Seas in 1958. This convention was the first of a series of treaties that would eventually lead to the adoption of UNCLOS. The conference was also a landmark event in the history of international law, as it was the first time that a large number of states had gathered to discuss the law of the sea.

The conference was a landmark event in the history of international law, as it was the first time that a large number of states had gathered to discuss the law of the sea. The conference was a success, as it resulted in the adoption of the Geneva Convention on the High Seas in 1958. This convention was the first of a series of treaties that would eventually lead to the adoption of UNCLOS. The conference was also a landmark event in the history of international law, as it was the first time that a large number of states had gathered to discuss the law of the sea.

□□□□□□ □□□□□□□□ □□□□ □□□□□□ □□□□ □□□ □□□□□□□□