

Obtaining information from the client is essential for the success of the audit. This includes understanding the client's business, industry, and internal controls.

The auditor should also assess the risk of material misstatement, which is the risk that the financial statements are materially misstated. This risk is assessed based on the auditor's understanding of the client and the industry.

The auditor should also consider the client's management's integrity and the quality of the client's internal controls. This is important because management's integrity and the quality of internal controls are key factors in the auditor's assessment of risk.
