

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

PH.D. PROGRAM IN POLITICAL SCIENCE

The University of Chicago is a leading center of research and scholarship in political science. The Ph.D. program is designed to provide students with a rigorous and comprehensive education in the field. Students are encouraged to explore a wide range of topics and to engage in independent research. The program is supported by a faculty of distinguished scholars and a rich tradition of academic excellence.

Students in the Ph.D. program are required to complete a series of courses, including core courses in political theory, comparative politics, and international relations. They are also required to complete a dissertation, which is a major contribution to the field. The program is supported by a variety of resources, including libraries, research centers, and fellowships. Students are encouraged to participate in seminars and conferences, and to engage in collaborative research with faculty and other students.

The University of Chicago is committed to the highest standards of academic excellence. The Ph.D. program is designed to provide students with a rigorous and comprehensive education in the field. Students are encouraged to explore a wide range of topics and to engage in independent research. The program is supported by a faculty of distinguished scholars and a rich tradition of academic excellence.

ADMISSIONS

For more information about the Ph.D. program, please contact the admissions office. We are happy to answer your questions and provide you with the information you need to make a decision about applying to the University of Chicago.

