ANSWER

The diagram illustrates the structure of the 'K' character in the 1972 Japanese character set. It consists of three main horizontal rows of rectangles. The first row contains 10 rectangles. The second row contains 6 rectangles. The third row contains 10 rectangles. There are two gaps: one between the first and second rows, and another between the second and third rows. This visual representation corresponds to the byte sequence of the character, where the first two bytes define the character's width and the third byte defines its height.
