

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON THE PROTECTION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

The Commission on Human Rights, established by the Economic and Social Council in 1946, was the first international body to deal with human rights. It was created in the aftermath of the Second World War, a period when the world was beginning to realize the need for a common set of standards to protect the rights of all people.

The Commission's work was based on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations in 1948. This document set out the basic rights and freedoms to which all people are entitled, and it served as the foundation for the development of international human rights law.

The Commission's mandate was to promote and protect human rights throughout the world. It did this by receiving reports from governments, conducting investigations, and making recommendations. It also played a key role in the development of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which entered into force in 1966.

The Commission's work was carried out through a series of sessions held in Geneva. It was during these sessions that the Commission discussed human rights issues and adopted resolutions. It also held public hearings and invited governments to explain their actions. The Commission's work was supported by a secretariat and a budget provided by the United Nations.

The Commission's work was a landmark in the history of human rights. It was the first time that a body of international law had been established to deal with human rights. The Commission's work paved the way for the development of the United Nations Human Rights Council, which was established in 2006.

The Commission's work was a testament to the power of international law. It showed that people from different countries could come together to address common concerns. The Commission's work was a reminder that human rights are not just a theoretical concept, but a reality that can be achieved through the efforts of all people.

000: 00000000000, 0000 000000 000000 000000 0000, 000 000 0
000000000 00000 0000000000 0000000000 000000000 0000 000000 000000
0000 000000